What we want to see Friday

By libby and roberta | June 3, 2009

Centrifugal force has spun First Friday out to the far ends of the city these days. In addition to what Roberta mentioned in her Weekly Update on First Friday, today, here are a few more must-see events, and they take you from Chinatown to Fishtown, from Center City to Northern Liberties.

Having just read that buses are the greenest way to travel, artblog declares the need for a jitney service from gallery zone to gallery zone. Is anyone listening? We'd start it ourselves if we had the means and the time and the ability.

So get on your bikes or the el or whatever you travel in, and have some fun. We certainly plan to.

Christine Jones at Proximity Gallery

Christine Jones, drawing featured at Proximity Gallery. Opening this First Friday

Plucked from obscurity by Manya Scheps and the faux collective Poached Pack for her recent BFA show at Penn, artist Christine Jones brings her manic drawings to Proximity. Can't wait.

Opening Reception June 5 6pm-9pm
Show Runs June 5 - June 30

This newish gallery in the VoxBuilding is making us sit up and pay attention, this time with a show featuring Beth Brandon, David Guinn, Jackie Hoving, Regin Iloria, Misako Inaka and Thomas Vance. (While you're in the building, check out the excellent Bill McRight at another newish gallery, A+H/VHS, which operates out of its flat files. And of course there's new stuff at Vox.)
